

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Global Health Impact team would like to thank all of the people and organizations that have contributed to the project.

We are especially thankful for recent discussions about the project at the Global Fund; the Edmund J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University; the University of Manchester; the American Philosophical Association; Yale University; Binghamton University; the University of Delaware; London School of Economics; William and Lee College; Goethe University; California University; University College London; Santa Clara University; the Universidad De Antioquia; Carnegie Mellon University; the American Society for Bioethics and Humanities; Stanford University; Dickinson College; Newcastle on the Tyne; and researchers at UNAIDS, the World Health Organization, and Médecins Sans Frontières along with countless others.

We are also especially grateful for support from Academics Stand Against Poverty; Stanford University's Center for Ethics in Society; Justitia Amplificata and the Center for Advanced Studies in Frankfurt, Germany; Binghamton University's Citizenship, Rights, and Belonging Transdisciplinary Area of Excellence collaborative grant program; the Swedish-Franco Program in Philosophy and Economics in Paris, France; the Center for Poverty Research in Salzburg, Austria; the World Institute for Development Economics Research in Helsinki, Finland; and the Berkman and Falk Foundations at Carnegie Mellon University.