

Vaccine Ethics: What Are We Learning from COVID-19?

DEC 7, 2020

CREDIT: Carlos Reusser/Public Domain

Ruth Faden

Johns Hopkins Berman Institute of Bioethics

Full Video: Vaccine Ethics: What Are We Learning from COVID-19?

As the race for COVID-19 vaccines enters its next stage, we are faced with broad ethical challenges, along with specific questions of principle and practice. How should countries and the global community plan for distribution and allocation? What can and should be done to bolster trust in the vaccines? Public health experts Ruth Faden, Nicole Hassoun, Clive Meanwell, and Reed Tuckson discuss these questions and much more in this webinar moderated by Jeffrey Kahn, director of the Johns Hopkins Berman Institute of Bioethics.